

What in the World Happened this Week in the Art Studio?

Classrooms:

Two's, Preschool, Pre K and Kinder Prep

Date:

November 21st to November 25th

This week in the Art Studio we continued to work on our snowman sculpture. This extended group project has taken us two weeks, and has involved all ages of children.

This exciting project was initially inspired by three paper mache' pumpkins, which had outlived their usefulness. Instead of tossing them out I challenged the children to imagine how we could "re-purpose" them into something special. The unanimous response was to make a snowman to place in the front lobby, for all to enjoy.

The children worked together to cover the sculpture in paper mache', this is a process involving a paste made from flour and water and newspaper. After many layers, the result is a strong and durable foundation ready for painting. We added a football helmet also made by the children, and viola we had a "seahawks" snowman.

This will be on display through December as a beautiful example of the children's creativity and cooperation.
